The best woodland games

The forest is a peaceful place that fills us with energy. It's where imagination, adventure, and nature collide. Whether it's exciting treasure hunts, creative crafting, or fun active games – the possibilities are almost endless. Here are some ideas for games that will inspire children while also teaching them about the wonders of the woodland.

Adventure and discovery games

Treasure hunt: Hide small items or use objects found in the forest (like pinecones or unique leaves). Provide the children with a map or clues to find the “treasure”.

Nature bingo: Create a list of things for children to find (e.g. a bird, moss, a mushroom). The one who finds the most wins!

Forest memory: Collect natural items (like leaves, stones, or cones) and let the children look at them briefly. Cover them, then ask them to guess what's missing.

Blindfold trail: One child is blindfolded while another guides them through the forest with verbal instructions like “step right.” This builds trust and awareness of their environment.

Forest map-making: Children draw a map of their surroundings and mark key features, like large trees, rocks, or little huts.

Build a mini island: Find a small clearing or a tree stump and let the children create a fantasy world out of moss, twigs, and stones.

Creative games

Forest art: Using branches, leaves, and stones, children can create pictures or sculptures of animals or imaginary figures.

Stick towers: Gather sticks and try to build the tallest tower or sturdiest hut.

Natural mandalas: Children can lay colourful leaves, flowers, cones, and stones in circles to make beautiful patterns.

Nature crowns: Bend flexible branches into crowns and decorate them with leaves and flowers.

Forest music: Create rhythms by tapping sticks on trees, clapping stones together, or shaking rustling leaves.

Telling forest stories: Sit in a circle. Each person takes a turn adding a part to a story that takes place in the forest.

Active games

Obstacle course tag: Use trees, logs, and roots to turn a game of tag into an adventurous challenge.

Balance course: Find fallen trees, stones, or roots for the kids to balance on.

Pinecone target practice: Set up a target (e.g. a bucket or a circle of sticks) and see who can land the most cones inside.

Animal tag: Choose an animal (e.g. fox) to be the “hunter”, while the other children are the prey. Anyone caught joins the hunter’s team.

Tree-to-tree races: Choose two trees some distance apart and challenge children to race in fun ways – running backwards, hopping, or crawling.

Exploring hideouts: Children can search for natural hiding spots in the forest, such as under bushes or fallen tree trunks.

Role-playing games

Forest knights and fairies: Dress up as fantasy characters using natural materials and create your own woodland story.

Forest animals: Each child imitates a forest animal while the others guess what it is.

Forest restaurant: Pretend to run a restaurant, making “pasta” from leaves and “cakes” from pinecones.

Tree spirits: Decorate tree trunks with faces made from clay and leaves, then create stories about their magical powers.

Pirates on a treasure hunt: Let imaginations run wild as children act out their pirate adventure in search of buried treasure.

Educational games

Nature detectives: Hand out magnifying glasses or small binoculars and encourage kids to investigate and describe insects or plants.

Leaf quiz: Collect leaves from different trees and see who can identify them correctly.

Animal tracks: Look for footprints or chew marks and guess which animal has been nearby.

Animal sound challenge: Listen carefully to the forest – who can recognise or imitate the most animal sounds?

Leaf and bark rubbings: Place paper over leaves or tree bark and rub with crayons to create natural prints.

Build a weather station: Create simple measuring tools, like a rain gauge using a jar or a wind catcher from leaves.

Cooperative games

Forest memory XL: Hide pairs of identical natural items (like matching leaves or cones) around the forest. The children then have to work together to find them.

Tree quiz: One child describes a tree (e.g. "Its bark is smooth.") while the others guess which tree it is.

Forest maze: Use sticks to create a small maze on the ground, then challenge the children to find their way out.

Story cards

These story cards to print and cut out take children on a journey through an imaginative winter story based in South Tyrol. Each card contains part of a short story. Together, they create a flowing winter tale.

Let's start:

1. Download the cards as a PDF.
2. Print out the cards on slightly thicker paper.
3. Cut out the individual cards along the lines.
4. Place them in front of you, either in the right order or mixed up – whichever you prefer.

Here's how to use them:

- As a story to read aloud: Read a card every day – the ideal winter bedtime ritual.
- To encourage creativity: Ask your child, “What do you think will happen next?” or “How would you continue the story?”
- As craft inspiration: Draw pictures to go with the story or make little figures out of natural materials, playdough, or paper.
- While travelling: The cards fit perfectly into your bag – ideal for car journeys or cosy moments in the hotel.

Tip:

You can store the cards in a small box or envelope as a souvenir from your winter holiday in South Tyrol.

Story card set: Winter magic in South Tyrol

Card 1: The mysterious paw print

One morning, while walking with her dad in the snowy forest above Merano shortly after sunrise, Lisa discovered a strange paw print in the snow. It was round, with three claws, and much bigger than a dog's. “Maybe it's a snow creature?” Dad whispered with a grin. Lisa decided to follow the tracks.

Card 2: The trail to the old larch tree

The paw prints led across meadows, past an igloo made of snow, and finally ended at a gnarled old larch tree. There, Lisa found a small frozen acorn with glittering crystals. “A sign!” said Lisa. When she touched the acorn, a light flickered briefly between the branches of the tree.

Card 3: The talking marmot

Suddenly, there was a rustling in the snow and a marmot popped up wearing a hat and scarf. “You’ve found the spark!” it said. “Only children with a big imagination can see it.” Lisa was amazed. The marmot went on: “My name is Mo, and I need your help!”

Card 4: The missing winter feather

Mo told Lisa about the missing winter feather that belonged to Emilia the snowy owl. Without it, the owl could no longer fly. The feather had been blown away by the wind and only someone with keen eyes and a warm heart could find it. Lisa nodded with determination.

Card 5: The search in the snow labyrinth

Together, they made their way to the old snow labyrinth at Lake Resia/Reschensee. The wind was howling and the paths were slippery. New puzzles awaited around every bend: which snow hut was missing its chimney? Where was the animal whose shadow didn't fit? Lisa bravely solved them all.

Card 6: The scent from the mountain hut

After the labyrinth, they were greeted by the scent of warm apple strudel. A family of snow hares was sitting in a little mountain hut. "We have something for you!" they cried, handing Lisa a small parcel with a silver ribbon.

Card 7: Returning the feather to Emilia

Inside the parcel was the winter feather – soft, iridescent, and with golden highlights. When she reached the owl, Lisa carefully lifted the feather into the air. A breeze took hold of the feather, it floated onto Emilia’s back, and with a flap of her wings, she soared into the South Tyrolean winter sky.

Card 8: The gift of the Northern Lights

As a farewell gift, Lisa received a small amulet with the sign of the Winter Friends. “You have shown heart, courage, and curiosity,” said Mo. “You are now part of our story.” And sometimes, when it snows, Lisa’s sure she can see the Northern Lights twinkling in her jacket pocket.

Winter bingo

Print a bingo sheet for each player, cut out the picture cards, and shuffle them well.

Draw one card at a time and show it to everyone. Whoever has the picture on their sheet marks it (with a counter, button, or cross).

The winner is the first person to mark an entire row (horizontally, vertically, or diagonally) and shout "Bingo!".

Tip:

If you want to extend the fun, just keep playing until the entire sheet is full.
